

Allison Azersky
TEED 540: Legal Rights and Responsibilities of Teachers
6/26/12

We have learned that following the IEPs of our students is a legal obligation we have as teachers. How likely is it that legal action will result if we are not able to meet the requirements of all the IEPs of students in our classes?

Who should I go to in my school or district if I need legal advice? Would the principal be the first person to contact?

I am aware, and in the readings it was mentioned, that by law, ELL students are entitled to receive appropriate English language instruction. If I am in a school where I feel like this legally granted right is not being met, what can I do?